About AAWAA:

AAWAA supports and promotes Asian American women artists in the visual, literary, and media arts. Founded in 1989, AAWAA promotes the visibility of Bay Area Asian American women artists through programs that exhibit, interpret, publish, and document their work. We provide resources to the arts community through exhibitions, readings, a speakers bureau, and through the distribution of visual and audio Educational Presentation Packets. By educating art establishments that have historically excluded works by Asian American women, AAWAA provides artists with access to these venues, and furthers the goal of establishing the place of Asian American women in American art history.

AAWAA is a 501(c)3 non-profit organization.
